(U) Event Overview

(U//~~FOUO~~) Brought to Louisiana by French settlers in the year 1699, Mardi Gras is a Catholic tradition that provides a period of merriment prior to the penitential season of Lent.¹ Mardi Gras festivities officially begin on January 6th and culminate on Fat Tuesday, the day before Ash Wednesday and the start of Lent.

(U//~~FOUO~~) Since 1857, individual carnival clubs known as Krewes have celebrated Mardi Gras by sponsoring over two thousand parades.² The 2008 New Orleans Mardi Gras parade lineup includes 68 parades spread out over various parts of the city.³ Some of the most widely known Krewes are the Krewe of Rex and the Krewe of Zulu. Both Rex and Zulu roll through the streets of New Orleans on Fat Tuesday attracting thousands of screaming revelers. The revelers line up early in the morning along the parade routes hoping to get their fair share of Mardi Gras loot which ranges from the traditional beads, cups, and doubloons to the highly coveted coconuts and African spears handed out by the Krewe of Zulu.

(U//~~FOUO~~) In the 1990's, the economic impact of Mardi Gras on the city of New Orleans surpassed the half billion dollar mark. The 2008 Mardi Gras season is expected attract over 700,000 visitors and generate an economic impact of one billion dollars.⁴

(U) International Terrorism Threat

(U) 2009 Mardi Gras

(U) Synopsis: Mardi Gras is a Catholic tradition brought to Louisiana by French settlers in 1699. The term, literally meaning "Fat Tuesday," refers to events of the Carnival celebrations officially beginning in January and ending at midnight before Ash Wednesday, the start of Lent. Carnival typically involves a public celebration or parade combining some elements of a circus and public street party. Individual carnival clubs known as Krewes have celebrated Mardi Gras by sponsoring over two thousand parades since 1857. The 2009 New Orleans Mardi Gras parade schedule includes 69 parades spread out over various parts of the city.

(U) Event Overview

(U) The 2012 New Orleans Mardi Gras event will occur on Tuesday, 21 February 2012, and be preceded by parades and other festivities beginning on 4 February 2012. During the period 4 – 21 February a total of 53 parades will progress through the streets and waterways of metropolitan New Orleans, specifically, the parishes of Orleans, Jefferson, and St. Tammany.³ Festivities ongoing during this time period include outdoor concerts, festivals, and post-parade extravaganzas.

(U) Parades and other festivities will attract large crowds, which will line the streets of the metropolitan New Orleans area and congregate within bars, night clubs, and other commercial establishments. Parades will attract the largest crowds, which will be spread over parade routes that extend several miles. Appendices A through C highlight the major routes within the parishes of Orleans and Jefferson that parades will proceed along.
